

FAQ GRI REPORT VERIFICATION

Frequently Asked Questions About GRI Report Verification

Business leaders rely on clear, independently verified sustainability reporting to provide stakeholders, partners and consumers proven performance data they can trust. Verified sustainability reporting ensures reported information is robust and reliable and meets the highest standards aligned with globally recognized reporting guidelines.

Here, we answer some of the most common questions relevant to DEKRA GRI Report Verification. If your question is not listed below, please contact our experts for assistance.

1. What is the Global Reporting Initiative (GRI)?

The GRI is an independent, international organization promoting the most widely used standards for sustainability reporting around the world. The GRI standard for sustainability reporting provides a framework to accurately measure and objectively communicate environmental, social and governance (ESG) performance.

2. What purpose does sustainability reporting serve?

A broad term used to describe reporting on economic, environmental and social impacts, sustainability reporting is the practice of measuring and disclosing a balanced and reliable representation of organizational performance toward sustainable development used for the clear, transparent reporting needed to meet evolving standards, comply with changing regulation and satisfy investors and stakeholders.

3. Why is GRI verification of my sustainability reporting important?

Verification of your sustainability report in accordance with GRI guidelines can highlight your leadership role in sustainable development, increase trust among stakeholders and set you apart from the competition.

4. How can DEKRA GRI verification services strengthen my business?

GRI Report Verification services conducted by DEKRA experts help you prove accurate and objective reporting, ensure compliance with relevant standards and regulations and increase confidence in your brand.

5. What are the criteria for sustainability reporting?

All information provided in the report must be comprehensive, accurate, objective and appropriate for comparison. DEKRA GRI Report Verification makes sure all data related to social or environmental performance is included in the report. We help you collect and report robust data suitable for planning and decision making. Our experts cast an independent eye over your reporting to ensure data is presented in an unbiased manner. We help you to include useful data that can be compared and contrasted.

6. How is DEKRA GRI Verification conducted?

We examine how information is collected, analyzed and presented to designate your sustainability report as valid. Throughout the verification process, DEKRA experts work to ensure your compliance to recognized standards, help you reach unique sustainability goals and support your nurturing of a meaningful, long-lasting environmentally and socially conscious corporate philosophy.

Speak with a representative today to get started on your GRI Report Verification!

CONTACT US!

DEKRA Audit

audit@dekra.com

www.dekra.com/en/audit

Status 09/2023