

Certification of your BCM

ISO 22301 product sheet

A functioning business continuity management helps you to effectively avert possible emergencies and disruptions and to avoid associated consequences such as operational outages and economic damage.

What ISO 22301 stands for

The introduction of a business continuity management (BCM) system helps you to prevent serious damage caused by business disruptions that result from emergency situations. Maintaining a structured approach at a time of crisis can ensure the long-term survival of your company.

Overview of potential hazards:

- ▶ Power or IT outages, cyberattacks
- ▶ Supply chain bottlenecks
- ▶ Natural events such as floods, earthquakes and fires
- ▶ Criminal activity, sabotage, burglaries
- ▶ Sickness and loss of staff
- ▶ Failure of service providers
- ▶ Epidemics and pandemics
- ▶ Political unrest, terrorist attacks

Within the scope of an ISO 22301 certification, our experts check whether your management system meets the current requirements surrounding planning, development, implementation and monitoring.

Objectives of ISO 22301

As internal and external requirements increase and companies become increasingly dependent on global supply chains, they need to ensure that key operational functions are not interrupted in the event of serious disruptions, or, if so, only temporarily. This is done by identifying the critical business activities.

Likewise, it is necessary for the business processes to be designed so that their stability remains guaranteed and optimally protected in the case of an emergency.

Steps for your successful certification

1. Documents review in terms of the requirements of ISO 22301 for BCM systems
2. Project Meeting
3. Certification audit
4. Issuing of the certificate
5. Surveillance and/or recertification audit every 1-3 years
