

Proof of your sustainability with the use of biomass

REDcert certification product sheet

With certification according to the REDcert-EU standard, you demonstrate your sustainable use of biomass in the food and animal feed industry, and gain access to the European market.

Goals of the REDcert-EU standard

Sustainability in accordance with ecological, social and economic criteria forms an important part of politics and the economy. This also includes the increased use of renewable energy from biomass and waste products.

The REDcert-EU standard is recognized by the European Commission in accordance with the Renewable Energy Directive, or RED II for short, and allows companies to gain voluntary certification for sustainable value chains. Companies certify their compliance with the applicable sustainability requirements and the traceability throughout the supply chain. The REDcert is also applicable to all the economic operators in the respective value chain.

Your benefits

Certification according to the REDcert standard provides proof of your compliance with and implementation of the legal requirements. With certification, you benefit from advantages in funding applications, gain new sources of raw materials and are one step ahead of the competition. In improving your image, you gain both a long-term competitive advantage and security in a growing market. Compliance with the industry-wide standard isn't just a source of added value for the environment, but also for your business.

Your certification procedure

With the REDcert and REDcert², in addition to agricultural and biofuel companies, companies from the chemical, food and animal feed industries can also secure voluntary certification according to the recognized standard.

In this respect, our experts perform the following steps:

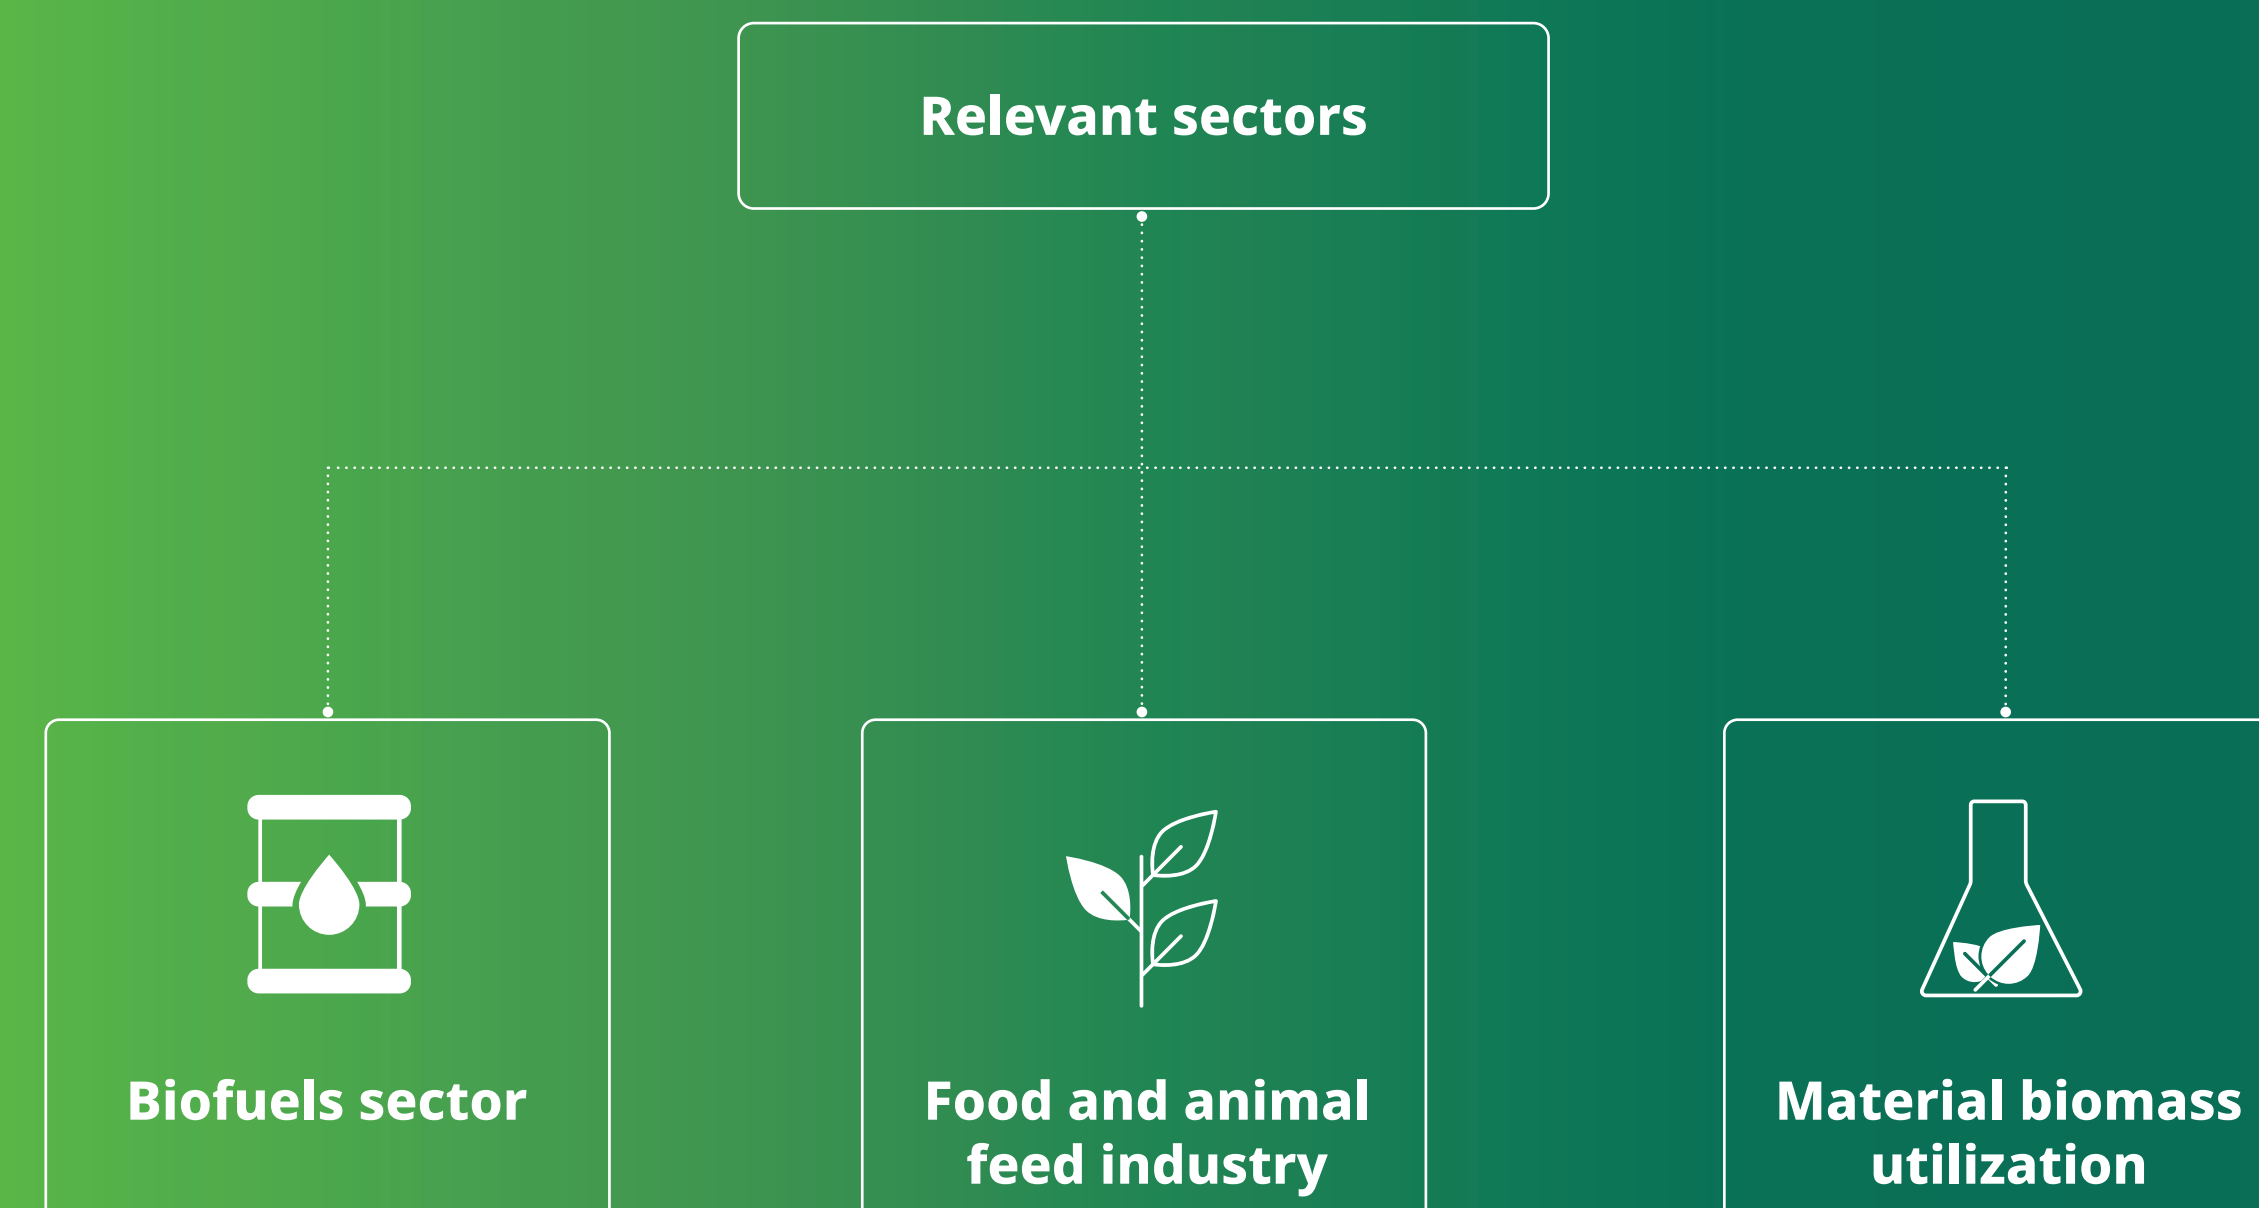

1. Optional information meeting

3. Creation of your audit report and assessment
4. Issuing of the certificate following completion of the certification
